Dear Sir/Madam:

As you are already aware good governance as a new paradigm of administration has emerged as the most desirable concept to be understood fully, appreciated objectively and implemented effectively. It has always been an effort of the Government to make the administration a model of good governance and citizen centric. Many departments of the GNCTD have adopted practices, which deserve appreciation as "good practices" and "success stories". However, these have largely remained a part of internal administration of the departments.

The Directorate of Training has decided to include "good practices and success stories" in the training programmes on "Good Governance". Accordingly, I would request that a note providing complete details of the good practices initiated by your department may be sent to the Directorate preferably within a month. The note may include the practices followed earlier, their weaknesses, salient features of new practices, the outcome of new practices and possibility of their replication in other departments. I would also request that a separate note containing details about new initiatives, if any, taken by your department may be forwarded to the Directorate of Training within a month. I would further request that if any department has not been able to initiate good practices, for whatever reason, such departments may send a nil report.

I would request an early response to the matter.

Yours Faithfully

(P.K. Tripathi)
Pr Secretary (Trg.)
